

December 4, 2007

News Release

Cheeseman Trucking, Inc. and Zumstein, Inc. have operated as partner companies under common ownership for almost 9 years. Each company has operated as a separate entity during this time. In the last couple of years, we have merged several functions including accounting, billing, payroll, safety and sales and marketing. These steps have proven successful so we have continued to look at other opportunities to improve our efficiencies particularly in these challenging times.

We are now at the point where we have decided to integrate the two operations completely. Therefore some time during the first quarter of 2008 we will begin operating as one company named Cheeseman, LLC. All personnel except for certain maintenance people will be working at one of our Cheeseman facilities with most functions being performed at our headquarters in Fort Recovery, Ohio. This means that the Zumstein office (but not the maintenance facility) in Lewisburg, OH will be closed. Zumstein, Inc. will still own some equipment and the Zumstein name will still appear on many trailers. However all Zumstein operations will be merged into Cheeseman, LLC and all employees will be working for that company.

We anticipate no interruption in the way we serve you. In fact we believe this reorganization will provide even better service. All telephone numbers, fax numbers, e-mail addresses will not change at this time.

Thank You